4. Hope Jones, the Famous Temperance Lecturer, Cites a Few distoric Examples to Prove the Touth of This Proposition.

[Copyright, 1900, by C. B. Lewis.] My Dear Fellow Citizens-It is my custom before proceeding to the susiness of the evening to take up a collection among the audience for the benefit of some charity. On this occasion the subject is the individual who stands before you. I have managed to along for the last three days of cents, but I can go no further. there is no doubt that I am worthy of all you can do for me, yet no one need feel under obligations to give. will now pass around the hat, and as I move among you I am glad to observe that the audience assembled here to night is one of the most cultivated I have seen for months. I will not be base enough to think that free a mission had anything to do with it. You came to hear one of the great questions of the day discussed by the of the great orators of the century and . had the price of tickets been 10 cents each I believe that one and all would have cheerfully coughed up. I to not and smothering spells, but Dr. Miles use that expression in a slang lense, but as a Latin phrase. I find that the collection amounts to 70 cents and, thanking you from the bottom of my heart and trusting that you may go out of here better men and women, I will now begin:

My friends, I have in mr pocket the figures showing just how many distilleries and breweries there are in the United States and just how much whisky and beer are made every 24 hours during the year. But why give them? Why tell you that 1,000,000 of sur population go to bed drunk every light in the year and that the money seent for drink every day would proving all the widows with sealskin sacks and French heeled shoes? We all know those things. Let us begin with Chastopher Columbus, who had rather mere to do with America than any man who has come after him. I give you his picture on the canvas. I want you to look at at closely and keep it in your minds, and every day for years to come I want you to ask yourself what would have happened if Columbus had been that sert of man. When Ferdinand and Is bella had fitted him out for his voyage suppose he had gone and got a three days' jag on and had rolled around in the mud and had had three or four scraps with other old bums. Can you for an instant believe that he would have been left in command of the expedition de that this country would have been siscovered for the next 50 years? But here was no boozing. He may have taken a farewell drink of coot beer for lemonade, as was eminently proper, but it

What Prompted Him.

A capital story of Rolf Boldrewood, the distinguished Australian novelist, is told. After T. A. Browne had suddenly leaped into fame as Rolf Boldrewood, author of "Robbery Under Arms," he continued for some years as stipendiary magistrate of Albany. One morning there was brought before him a rough bushboy of 14, charged with having held up several other boys on a country road. It was proved that he had presented a pistol at them and compelled them to empty all their pockets for his benefit.

"Dear me," said the surprised magistrate to the juvenile culprit, "what could have prompted you to do such a thing?"

"Reading 'Robbery Under Arms,'" replied the unabashed boy bushranger. -Chicago News.

What They Said.

"Did the girls say anything when had suffered for years with heart they heard of my engagement?" she asked with a little curiosity. "Very little," was the reply of her dearest friend.

> "But they said something?" "Oh, yes; they said something." "Well, what was it?"

"Well, most of them merely exclaimed, 'At last!" " There was a pause, and then she asked: "Well, what did some of the others say?"

"One of them said: 'Who'd have thought it?' Another, 'Will wonders never cease?' And a third"-

"Oh, never mind the rest," interrupted the fiancee; "I never did have much curiosity."-Pittsburg Chronicle-Telegraph.

> To Pack Eggs For Long Keeping. The yolk of the egg spoils much quicker than the white. For this reason it is important that the yolk should white. If the egg is placed on the side or large end the heavy yolk will settle to the bottom and come in contact with the shell, which admits the air. If it is placed on the small end it will always have a layer of white between it and the shell. Eggs absorb odors easily, therefore only odorless materials should be used when packing them.-Ladies' Home Journal.

Better to Have Waited.

The other morning Jones turned up at the office even later than usual. His employer, tired of waiting for him, had himself set about registering the day's transactions, usually Jones' first pen aside very deliberately and said to Jones, very sternly indeed, "Jones, this will not do!"

"No, sir," replied Jones gently, drawing off his coat as he glanced over his employer's shoulder, "it will not. You have entered McKurken's order in the wrong book. Far better to have waited till I came!"-Pearson's Weekly.

WHEN DOGS ARE SICK.

The Way to Give Medicine to These Highly Sensitive Patients.

In all treatment of a sick dog remember you are dealing with a highly sensitive and nervous patient. Be very gentle, avoid roughness or anything likely to alarm him. In giving him any liquid medicine do not open his mouth, but, placing him between your knees, with his face looking in the same direction as your own, gently raise his jaw and, pulling his lips away from his teeth on one side of his mouth, to form a cup or funnel, very slowly pour from bottle or spoon the quantity he is to have into it.

Keep his head raised for a minute or two and if he does not swallow the dose insert a spoon between his front teeth. This will have the effect of drawing off his attention from the medicine and he will usually swallow left hand under lower jaw, press firmly on each side with thumb and finger at battle of Bull Run or something of that his mouth, when the dose should be put into the mouth as far back as

This will usually cause him to open possible over the tongue (or he will spit 't out) and close the jaws somewhat sharply, and in most cases the deed is done. If any trouble arises with the action of his front paws this may be got over by wrapping him round with a shawl or coarse apron.

When once you have got into the way of it, you will be surprised how simple it is. I am quite sure a practiced owner or kennelsman would dose a dozen dogs while a novice was making a bungle over one.-"All About Dogs." by Charles Henry Lane.
